ACTION IS DEMANDED

To Revive Business Even If
Key Points of Roosevelt's
Program Are ShelvedBy William S. Neal
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(INS)—The administration today opened a drive for action on wage-hour legislation in an effort to shatter the fog of uncertainty which enveloped the extraordinary session of Congress.

With both Senate and House virtually idling their time while Democratic leaders struggled to avert threatened party splits, Republican leaders rallied for a concerted attack on the New Deal.

Demands for action to revive business—even if it means shelving key points of President Roosevelt's special session program—continued to resound in both branches.

There was a possibility that a bipartisan revolt might upset the decision of the Treasury and House Ways and Means tax subcommittee to postpone tax legislation until the regular session in January. The subcommittee hastened to assure tax changes to aid business.

The situation was:
1. Chairman Mary T. Norton (D) of New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee, thrust her petition to discharge the Rules Committee from consideration of the wage-hour bill before the House, appealing for 218 signatures to make a vote on the floor possible.

2. House Ways and Means Tax Subcommittee, after agreeing to lift the undistributed profits tax from 67½ per cent of the corporations having incomes less than $5,000, considered further exemptions for corporations earning up to $50,000 a year.

By Edward B. Lockett

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(INS)—Unruly and for the moment without a program of procedure, the Senate slipped into special session harness today already plagued by a bitter war within the unwieldy Democratic majority.

On the surface, leaders smoothed things over as best they could, but backstage, forces supporting the anti-lynching legislation carried on a rough and tumble fight with reorganization bill supporters led by Senator Byrnes (D) of South Carolina. Leaders want to take up the reorganization bill first of all, and debate it either to conclusion and action, or until the new agriculture legislation can be brought to the floor. But Senators Wagner (D) of New York, and Van Nuys (D) of Indiana, co-sponsors of the anti-lynching bill, are determined their measure shall get precedence over the others.

The indications seemed to promise victory to the reorganization group, for the Democratic leader, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, and other administration lieutenants, favor this course. Wagner and Van Nuys contend that because anti-lynching was placed second on the session agenda by agreement reached at the conclusion of the last session, and because the subject given first place, agriculture, is not ready for debate, the anti-lynching bill rightfully comes first.

Add X-Ray Machine To
Moffo's Shoe Shop Equipment

Moffo's Shoe Shop, Mill street, now boasts one of the most complete and modern shoe services in this section with the addition of an X-ray machine. The new machine, which arrived yesterday, will be used to determine the bone formation of the foot and in this way the exact style shoe necessary can be accurately gauged.

With the addition of the new machine Moffo's Shoe Shop is now prepared to give complete shoe fitting service to all of its patrons. It is especially adaptable to children, according to Miss Helen Moffo, because the child cannot tell exactly whether or not the shoe fits as it should. By using this machine, however, a positive check is assured.

The installation of this machine culminates 21 years of effort on the part of Moffo's Shoe Shop to give its customers the best in shoe fitting service.

By Kingsbury Smith

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Nov. 16—(INS)—Seduction and even pretended love are still among the feminine wiles used by Europe's modern "Mata Hari's" today to obtain military secrets of foreign powers or lead to their doom unfaithful espionage agents.

Word has just been received by the British Intelligence Service that a beautiful young Swiss girl was responsible for the tracking down of Ignatius Reiss, a Pole, who had been acting abroad on behalf of the Soviet Secret Police and whose bullet-riddled body was found recently on a lonely Swiss road.

Held in the death grip of the murdered man's Swiss was a lock of hair which the Swiss and French police are convinced came from the head of the Swiss girl.

American Legion Auxiliary
Has Meeting in Langhorne

LANGHORNE, Nov. 16—Members attending the November meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary of Jesse W. Soby Post, in the Memorial House, last evening, totaled 25. The business session was in charge of Mrs. George Morris, South Langhorne.

Reports of many activities were heard, these including: one by Mrs. Frank Cassidy on the Halloween party conducted for the junior drum and bugle corps; membership drive by leaders of the two sides, Mrs. Leo McCarthy, Hulmeville, and Mrs. Warren Randall; report of the Armistice dinner, by Miss Katherine Keating, South Langhorne.

The Auxiliary decided to purchase a baton for use of the junior drum and bugle corps. Welfare committee reports also showed work done for the needy.

The minutes of the October meeting were presented by Mrs. Gilbert Bonnell, and treasurer's report by Mrs. Robert Leedom.

A card party was planned for the evening of Friday, December 3rd, this to benefit the drum and bugle corps. The committee in charge consists of: Mrs. Leo McCarthy and Mrs. George Thorpe, Hulmeville; Mrs. John Kaleda and Mrs. Cassidy, Langhorne.

The report of the bi-county council session at Narberth in October was presented by Mrs. Bonnell. Date of the December meeting was advanced one week, due to the holiday season. The session will be on December 13th.

Refreshments of "Raggedy Ann" salad, salted crackers, coffee, chocolates and mints were served by Mrs. Warren Bilger, South Langhorne, and Mrs. C. Wesley Haefner, Hulmeville. Those named as hostesses for December are Mrs. Harry Bergbauer and Mrs. Ralph Christie.

TO USE 4,000 BULBS

BURLINGTON, N. J., Nov. 16—The business center of this town is to be elaborately decorated for the holiday season this year, according to plans being made by the Burlington Trade Association.

All merchants are to be asked to co-operate in meeting the cost of the project and a committee has been named to attend to the details. This committee consists of Elmer Anderson, J. Louis Fuller, P. C. Scholl, Walter R. Anderson, Alexander Denbo, William Stillman, Elhan Reeve, Richard MacDougal, Floyd Goldy, Glen W. Chambers and Arthur Goldie.

The plans call for the stringing of laurel strands between the lamp posts along each side of High street, from 223 High street to City Hall, and along the north side of Broad street, to Stacy street.

At two-foot intervals there will be electric bulbs, which will be lighted each night. It is estimated 8,000 feet of laurel strands will be needed for the proposed decorations, as well as 4,000 bulbs.

Wants Hearings On Federal Appointments

Washington, Nov. 16—Declaring the Senate "railroaded" confirmation of Senator Hugo Black as associate justice of the Supreme Court, Senator Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire, today moved for full public hearings on all Federal judiciary appointments.

Bridges said following the "Black incident," "it is the duty of the Senate to give the public full opportunity for expression regarding any appointment having to do with the Federal judiciary." "Like many others he deplored the method employed by the Senate when Mr. Justice Black was confirmed," he said. "The resolution which I will introduce to amend the Senate rules will prevent any person regardless of who he is, from being confirmed without the public being given an opportunity to express as to the fitness of the candidate for the position."

To Consider Resolutions

Harrisburg, Nov. 16—With the election of a convention state for 1938 completed, the National Grange was expected to devote today to the hundred or more resolutions now in the hands of various standing committees, action on which will determine the policy and organization on state and national issues for the ensuing year.

In the legislative committee alone were 25 resolutions of the day and tomorrow's sessions were to be given over almost entirely to strict business meeting and hearing on committee reports.

O'Connell Gang Escapes

Jamesville, N. Y., Nov. 16—Cooly and almost casually, three of the O'Connell kidnaping gang awaiting transfer to escape-proof Alcatraz walked out of Onondaga prison today, guns in their hands and one guard with them as a shield, and leaving five others bound hand and foot.

Trussed in his own machine, the hapless guard later was abandoned in nearby Syracuse, where the gang had driven him. And, only a few minutes later, a mysterious roadster with New Jersey license plates roared through the darkened streets, possibly carrying the desperado trio and their guns.

With saws smuggled into the prison, pint size Percy Geary, paved the way. Nobody noticed him sawing away the bars of his cells. It was too late to become suspicious when Geary squeezed through a foot size gap in the bars, confronted guard John Corbett with a gun and forced the release of Harold "Red" Crowley and John J. Oley.

ASK EARLY RETURN OF UNEMPLOYMENT CARDSAll Information Must Be Placed Thereon for Return
By November 20th

DELIVERY TODAY

Unemployment cards will be distributed today, states postmaster Joseph P. Duffy, who is stressing the necessity for immediate returns.

Cards will be given one to every house, or more if more than one is not working.

These cards must be completed with all information, and signed by the unemployed person. They should be mailed immediately after finished; returned to the post office at Bristol, by dropping them in a mail box, handed to a carrier, or delivered at the Post Office in person. The cards must be returned absolutely, not later than midnight of November 20th.

Every question on the card must be answered. If an individual desires information to fill the card out, apply at the post office, or ask any carrier, clerk or rural carrier.

It is the purpose for this national unemployment census to ascertain the exact number of persons who are not unemployed or only partially unemployed. To find this information it will be necessary for every unemployed person to obtain and complete an unemployment report card. If you do not receive a form or card, please apply immediately to your carrier or post office for one.

VISIT CLYMER GRAVE

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 16—One hundred and fifty were present at the banquet, served in Robert Morris high school auditorium, Saturday evening, and which was part of the local celebration marking the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Federal Constitution.

Colonel Robert Morris, Harrisburg, a descendant of Robert Morris of Revolutionary time, was the speaker.

A program of vaudeville and music was given, and the banquet was served by a caterer.

In the afternoon the memory of George Clymer, signer of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, was honored at brief but impressive ceremonies at the Friends' Meeting House on East Hanover St., Trenton, N. J., conducted by the Morrisville Committee on the Constitution Celebration.

Because of the inclement weather, the addresses were made in the meeting house. The Rev. Oscar W. Henderson, representing the city, paid tribute to the patriot, as did Mayor Thomas B. Stockham, of Morrisville; Charles Boehm, chairman of the executive committee on the celebration, and Arthur Moon. Mr. Boehm was chairman of the meeting.

The audience then filed slowly to the graveyard where a wreath was placed on the grave of the patriot by Ann Nutting Mercur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Mercur, of Burlington, and a sixth lineal descendant of Clymer.

The group then sang a verse of "America," accompanied by three trumpeters—Donald Salisbury, Robert Jennings and Richard Wahl, of Morrisville High School. Taps were then sounded and the ceremony was completed.

Taken Suddenly Ill While At
His Employment; Dies
In Trenton Hospital

Francis H. Hess, formerly of 2002 Trenton avenue, died suddenly yesterday at 3.50 p. m., following an attack of acute indigestion and a heart attack, he being stricken while at his employment as equipment operator for the Pennsylvania State Highway Department.

Hess, who recently had resided at the home of Mrs. Bacon, Fallsington, was the husband of the late Elizabeth Hess, who died during the period of residence of the Hess family here, last February.

The former Bristolian, who leaves three children, had been employed for the past year as a truck driver for the highway department. Yesterday afternoon he was suddenly stricken and taken by some of his co-workers to the office of a Langhorne physician for treatment. Returning to his employment, his condition became more grave, and he was taken to Mercer Hospital, Trenton, N. J. Death occurred a short time later.

Mr. Hess is survived by his mother, who resides in Germantown; three children, Elizabeth, Grace and Donald. The funeral service will be conducted at eight a. m., on Friday, November 19th, at 612 E. Stafford street, Germantown. Burial will be in Allentown Cemetery.

Christmas Seal Sale Is Approaching; Aid Asked

The 31st Christmas Seal sale is approaching and the public is asked to help in the tuberculosis and health work by purchase of seals. Those who do not receive Christmas Seals and desire to purchase some are asked to communicate with Harold H. Keller, Doylestown, president of Bucks County Tuberculosis Society.

Due to economic conditions of the past several years work is very much on the increase. To carry on the work in the coming year on the basis of the past and with the increased work, the goal must be $3,500.

The society's nurse traveled, during the year, an average of 2000 miles per month, visiting active cases of tuberculosis in the community that are receiving treatment at home and contacts made which means members of families in which there is an active case of tuberculosis. These people are instructed as to the care in preventing the spread of the disease. A number of patients were transported to sanatoria and hospital clinics.

Theodore J. Fritschie
Dies; Ill Long Time

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 16—A well known resident, Theodore J. Fritschie, 39, died Saturday afternoon in the Abington Hospital, following a lengthy illness during which time he courageously battled a seemingly incurable disease. The deceased, a World War veteran, was advertising manager on the staff of the "Daily Intelligencer," for the past 10 years.

His last home here was at the residence of Mrs. William P. Barton, 47 West Oakland avenue, where he had resided for eight years.

The deceased, a graduate of Girard College, served overseas as a member of the American Expeditionary Forces in France as a member of the Tank Corps, and saw action at the front. He was a member of A. R. Atkinson, Jr., Post, No. 210, American Legion.

The only survivor is a brother, William Fritschie, of Pittsburgh, who came here today to complete arrangements for the funeral.

GOLD OF THE INCAS

Legend and history agree that the mines of Central and South America once yielded great quantities of gold. When the invading Spaniards demanded tribute from the Incas of Bolivia and Peru the precious metal was transported by back-breaking and heart-breaking labor. Location of some of the Inca mines is known, but the natives will not work them. Some of them, it is said, have been idle for nearly two centuries.

One reason for the value of gold is that its deposits, for the most part, are in inaccessible and difficult parts of the world. It is interesting to wonder what might happen if great stores of gold were found where the metal could be cheaply mined. Would it be necessary, as with the diamond deposits of South Africa, to control production and distribution of gold in order to maintain its high value? And what would happen, under those circumstances, to the monetary values of the civilized world?

It is unknown whether the Inca mines are still rich in precious metal. This may be determined when modern mining machinery reaches the Tipuani Valley, in Bolivia, sixty miles from La Paz. It is no great distance, but thick jungles and rough mountains made it more than a week's journey for the slaves who brought gold to the Spaniards. Freight airplanes, it is announced, will fly from La Paz to Tipuani in twenty-eight minutes and take in the mining machinery, which could not be transported there in any other fashion. After two centuries, one of the world's romantic mysteries will be solved by the airplane, which needs no highway if it has somewhere to start and a landing place at journey's end.

FLYING THE STRATOSPHERE

If it is true, as predicted, that another eighteen months will see airplane travel elevated to the stratosphere, there is likely to come with it an end to those distressing casualties that frequently mark air travel in the lower levels.

A survey of the research work accomplished to date indicates that the air lines are satisfied with both motor performance and cabin experiments, the latter involving the use of equipment to maintain air pressure similar to that only a few thousand feet above sea level. Air liners will cruise at 20,000 to 25,000 feet. Operating speeds will range from 235 to 250 miles an hour, as against the current 190 miles an hour. Thirty-five passengers will be accommodated in seat planes and twenty in sleeper planes. The coast-to-coast elapsed time bids fair to be cut from seventeen hours to fourteen hours or less westward, and from fifteen hours 30 minutes to twelve hours eastbound.

These predictions may be accepted as confirmation of earlier announced experimental work in which several of the leading airplane companies have been associated. Stratosphere flying, if the conditions of air pressure and lower temperatures can be met, certainly will add greatly to the safety of flying, so far as those dread collisions with mountain peaks are concerned.

Europe is a funny place. Over there, when a man thinks he is Napoleon, he gets locked up.

"Shame on that bold little hussy!" usually means, "I'm too old to attract 'em any more."

Weekly Letter to Home-Makers

A Letter Written by Miss Edna M. Ferguson to Home-Makers will appear in each Tuesday's issue of The Bristol Courier. Through this medium Miss Ferguson will give many helpful hints to home-makers.

Hardly have the miniature black cats ceased to scamper over black and orange Halloween tables, than the three major holidays loom up ahead: Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's.

Now is the time for all wise home-makers to take inventory; to plan table decorations and lists of supplies in advance of actual menus; to store molds of cranberry sauce in the refrigerator; to prepare mince and fruit cake—in short, to be so far ahead that holiday festivities will not be clouded by a frantic last-minute rush.

Brides, and even more experienced homemakers, would have no qualms about inviting in-laws or any special guests. If they would start soon enough to decide just what should be served, even to estimating the approximate time for preparation. The most expert chef takes that precaution, and who are we to be haphazard and guess at cooking time.

Snowy-white, or oyster white linen and crystal ware are growing in popularity, after years of devotion to gay linens. Certainly the average male diner will vote for the traditional snowy cloth, perhaps because it is custom, perhaps it makes him feel more at ease.

One argument in favor of a white table is that the coloring of the centerpiece and the favors is made doubly effective by contrast. If white candles are not used, green or true pumpkin orange are an appropriate Thanksgiving choice.

Green candles are particularly smart with green stemware. The blue-ribbon Thanksgiving table that won the prize last year in a show in Rockefeller Center, New York City, operations.

used green candles in pewter candlesticks, green stemware and a most effective centerpiece.

The centerpiece combined the modern vogue for fruit, or vegetables, with a bit of vine, the entire coloring working into the green theme. Piled on a flat black mirror were green grapes, a green squash and a spray of ivy, gracefully twined.

The subject of candlesticks suggests another advance job. Check over the silver and make certain that it is all polished. If you have a choice of candlesticks, use tall holders, rather than flat ones. The answer is practical. Tall candles on a formal table bring the lights high enough so that they do not annoy the eyes during the cross-table conversation. Flickering candles can be a source of irritation.

If you have a flat mirror, or an attractive pottery bowl, or a graceful silver container, try using fruit or vegetable combinations as a table centerpiece. A tiny flower-holder at each place, or individual corsages for the feminine guests may replace favors when no main flower centerpiece is used.

One chef maintains that if amateur cooks at home would take as much pains with all the rest of the holiday food as they do with turkey and cranberry sauce, the feast would linger longer in the memory of those present. This may be a wise hint to plan and prepare the vegetable accessories, the appetizers and the dessert with special care.

Chefs devote considerable time to creating decorative new ways of serving the noble Thanksgiving bird. In one luxurious hotel dining room last

"I'm going to be in a picture with Bruce Loring," said Clyde. "Don't Ames is managing me and we're going to cash in on all this publicity. He says it will make me rich—"

Lucy Lee stared, more grave than ever—"and famous and envied?" she said very slowly. "Is that what he told you?"

"Well, I don't know about the famous and envied part and I don't give a hoot. It's the money I'm after. Boy! Imagine what I can do for you with all that dough!"

"No, Clyde, please," she cried sharply. "Let's go home. That's what I want more than anything else. Honestly it is. I don't care about the money."

"But listen, sugar, don't be like that. I'd be crazy not to do what Ames says—cash in on all this, wouldn't I? Probably never get another chance as long as I live, to make money so fast."

"I know, but . . ."

"Besides, I like this town they call Hollywood. I think it's great. Why, would you believe it, I'm living in a fine suite at the swellest hotel in town and Ames says they won't charge me a cent. Because my living there is good for business, see? And say, you ought to have heard that crowd cheering us. And I'm booked up for some radio talks already and there were some men at the hotel waiting to sign me up for a personal appearance contract and—"

"I understand," Lucy Lee replied, watching his flushed face, as the words came tumbling eagerly out. How well she understood.

"Just wait till you know Bruce Loring better," he went on. He's the greatest fellow in the world. A regular prince! Never crabbied about what happened, when we were on that island for all those weeks. He treated the whole thing like a big joke. Said he was glad to be where the women couldn't get in his hair." He chuckled reminiscently. "And when I hurt my foot and couldn't walk for days, he waited on me . . . cooked my food . . . and kept me laughing with his fool jokes and monkeyshines."

"He does sound perfectly splendid, Clyde."

"I'm telling you, when you're marooned with a man like that, you get to know him. He's regular. And he lives in Hollywood, doesn't he? Or Beverly Hills. It's the same thing."

"Yes, of course," Lucy Lee agreed. "Well, then!" Clyde was triumphant. "That proves there are plenty of fine folks here, if you only get to know them, doesn't it? They're not all cheats and double-crossers."

"I suppose so."

"Of course it does."

"But Clyde . . .?" She stopped and was silent.

"What is it, sweetness?"

"You won't let anything come between us or spoil our happiness?"

"Foolish little Lucy Lee!" he answered tenderly as he bent to kiss her. "As if anything could! Now that I've really got you—I'll never let you go again."

"And Clyde . . .?"

"Uh-huh?"

"Don't let's tell anybody about our going to be married. Not for a while yet, I mean. Until I get strong again. I think it would be lovely to keep it just for ourselves, don't you? Of course, except for Daddy Carter and Don Ames. I suppose they will have to know. But let's make Don promise not to give out any publicity on it, shall we?"

"Of course, if that's the way you feel. Whatever you say. It's always going to be whatever you say from now on, Sweet."

But when Clyde came down the path he walked straight into a small group of enterprising reporters, who had followed his car from the hotel and waited for him to reappear from the Carter house after his prolonged visit. He found it impossible to evade their skillful questioning. Yes, he had been to call on Miss Lucy Lee Carter, but it didn't mean a thing. They were simply old friends. From the same home town, in fact. No, he had no announcement to make. But would he deny an engagement? Well—not exactly. That is—

Enough and more than enough to make the story: Returned Hero Calls on Beauty. Does not deny rumored betrothal. Marriage date not set, but probably soon. Lucy Lee Carter at one time supposed to be engaged to Neville Preston, noted director, who gave her her chance in pictures and had frequently been seen with his protégée at Hollywood gay spots. But more recently his attentions had apparently been centered on the dashing blonde, Adrienne Page. And so on and on, and on.

Lucy Lee cried when she read the stories. The mention of Neville Preston and Pearl made her feel as though ugly hands had been laid upon her heart, tearing it open to stare and sneer at what was hidden within. She had so hoped to avoid this kind of publicity.

Within a few hours after the appearance of the story she received three large baskets of flowers, with sweetly friendly little notes from girls she had neither seen nor heard from since the accident. They were so delighted she was improving and how marvelous about her engagement to Clyde Dixon. And they were always her devoted and loving pals.

The telephone began to ring as it had not done for weeks. So many people, it seemed, wished to offer their congratulations. How delightful she was to marry that interesting boy Clyde Dixon, whom they had heard over the radio and who was to make a picture with the great and only Bruce Loring. Was it true that N. P. N. had signed him up to a long-term contract?

Various fan magazine writers and chatter artists called up to ask for interviews, particularly her impressions of the returned heroes.

Salesmen tried to make appointments with her, representing everything from automobiles to cemetery lots. Stores which had begun to be insistent about bills now assured her that unlimited credit was at her disposal. No doubt since she was to be married soon she would be interested in trousseau articles, household furnishings, jewelry and numberless other items. Nothing would give them more pleasure than to serve her.

Don Ames chuckled when she told him. "Why not?" he asked. "They figure you're a good risk again. This is the swellest kind of a come-back for you. We ought to be able to get another studio contract out of it, soon as you're ready for work again."

"But Don, I'd rather not. Really I would." She blushed divinely. "I'm not interested in a career for myself, any more."

"I getcha, baby! One career in a family is enough, huh? Well, year, small crab apples, baked in the scooped-out halves of seedless oranges, formed a colorful wreath around the turkey, whose drumsticks were festive in frilled paper. The crab apples were cored and dusted with powdered sugar, before being baked in the oranges.

Many are the varieties of stuffing used, different combinations of ingredients and seasonings being adapted to the tastes of individual families.

Among the favorites are chestnuts, buttered bread crumbs seasoned with thyme and onions, oysters, or apples.

Apples and celery are a delicious combination, the tartness of the apple aiding digestion and flavor too. Among the stuffings listed for the holiday feast are: Prune and apple, cheese, nut, sausage and apple, vegetable (using raw spinach and such chopped vegetables as carrot, green pepper, onion and celery); soda crackers with chopped, roasted peanuts, and fruit stuffing, in which prunes, apricots, oranges and nuts are used.

A few general suggestions may help in the selection of a turkey. Young turkeys have black feet and youthful-looking claws. Older ones have pinkish feet and experienced claws. The ones with gray feet and ankles are apt to be three years old, or older.

The male bird, if one wants to know, has a bigger head, heavier wattles and more warts. In estimating the size of a turkey one should buy, a good rule is to figure on one pound for each person. More than one-half that weight will be bones and other items that must be discarded.

The oven time should be 18 to 22 minutes for each pound, depending on the size of the bird. The smaller bird requires the longer time for each pound. Throughout the baking time, fat should be spooned over the turkey. First use butter in boiling water, then the fat in the pan.

Our grandmothers used to serve boiled turkey with oyster sauce, seasoned with mint or parsley. If you are not stuffing the turkey with chestnuts, it is a good idea to use buttered chestnuts and brussels sprouts as the main vegetable.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1937
King Features Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD—When the next Tarzan picture is made, it is very doubtful if Glenn Morris and Eleanor Holm will be teamed again as the jungle hero and his mate. The two didn't get along at all.

Outspoken Eleanor was quoted in an interview as calling Morris "just a dumbbathie". Upshot of it was that the two refused to pose in any romantic still pictures together and the studio publicity department will have to use drawings to get them in a clench in its exploitation campaign.

The preview of "Second Honey-moon" saw Marjorie Weaver, pretty southern girl, get one of the most unusual breaks ever given a newcomer. After the film was over, an announcement flashed on the screen:

"Darryl F. Zanuck has just presented Marjorie Weaver, whom Twentieth Century-Fox believes will be one of its outstanding stars in 1938."

This was followed by a cutback to one of her scenes in the picture.

With the applause of the preview audience ringing in her ears, Miss Weaver walked out of the theater to face a mob of autograph fans, not one of whom recognized her. In a few months, though, it will be another story, for the actress goes into one of the leads in "Sally, Irene and Mary", and the studio is plugging her for stardom.

What price authenticity in pictures? Norma Shearer's gowns for "Marie Antoinette" are being copied exactly from photographic reproductions of paintings. Embroidered designs are studied under a magnifying glass so as to be perfect replicas of the originals. This job is so painstaking that 35 women work on one-hour shifts.

Randy Scott's trip to New York is to meet his sister, Mrs. Carl Robert, wife of a Swedish industrialist, whom he has not seen in 14 years.

We have an idea of turning this column occasionally into an open forum where you fans can air your views on controversial subjects and where, if necessary, the stars and movie moguls can make direct reply, or start arguments of their own.

A few sample subjects might be: Do you like to see the dignified stars made the victim of slapstick comedy as Myrna Loy was in "Double Wedding"? Or, do you think the stars are really getting a bad deal from the columnists, air or otherwise. Or, where do you think the star's responsibility to the fan ends? Should they receive fans who invade the privacy of their homes? Or pick your own subject.

If you are interested, let's hear from you. And try to keep your letters short and to the point.

Ever think you'd like to watch an operation? Olivia de Havilland believed she would and the other day paid a visit to the surgery of Dr. H. N. Enloe's sanitarium near the "Robin Hood" location. It was an appendectomy. The star entered the operating room dressed in white apron, mask, etc. The next thing she knew she was waked up in the hospital bed with a lump on her head and two nurses in attendance. She had fallen to the floor in a dead faint.

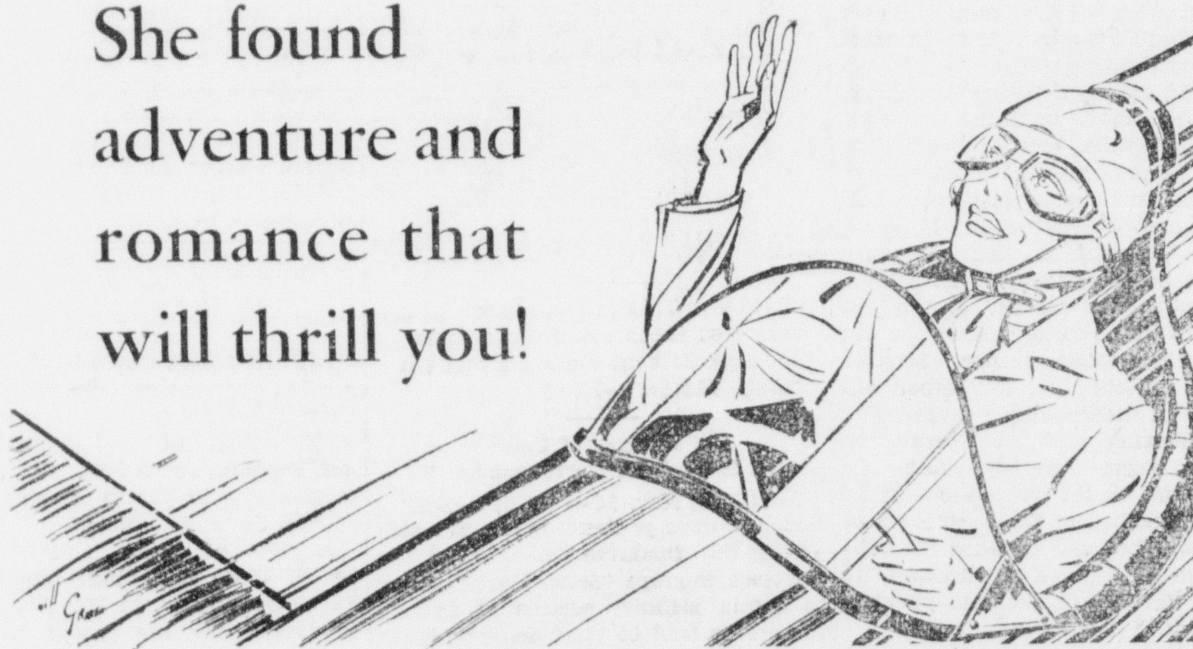

Chatter . . . Lucille Ball says she is too busy to marry Director Al Hall or anybody else. "How could I?" she asked us. "I don't even get Sundays off." . . . Hear that Marylyn Le Roy is planning to purchase several of Rudolph Valentino's silent vehicles for Fernand Gravet. . . . Shirley Ross sailed for New York and a Broadway vacation. . . . Certain exclusive Hollywood shop was thrown into a turmoil when Margaret Matzenauer fell down the stairs and had to be carried out on a stretcher. The prima donna has proved a good sport, though, by autographing the broken heel of her shoe and giving it to the manager. . . . Wendy Barrie is all set to surprise Hollywood with her singing voice. She's been studying under Eddie Kaye. . . . Hedy Lamarr's escort at the Cafe Lamaze was Reginald Gardiner. . . . And here's Hollywood's newest drink, as made at the Tropics—a rum concoction called a "head hunter" and served in a coconut shell.

When an egg is heated, its contents expand at a different rate than the egg shell. One authority says: "In fresh eggs, the air space within the shell is small. If expansion within the shell is greater than the size of the air space, something must give way. The shell usually cracks and lets out some of the white of the egg."

The cure for the breakfast tragedy is to put about one-half teaspoon of common table salt in the water before the eggs start to boil. Even if the shell does crack a bit, the white will not ooze out. Try cooking the eggs for children, or grown-ups. Have water boiling briskly, place eggs in the saucepan, cover and turn out the flame. Let stand exactly six minutes for the equivalent of a three-minute egg, or eight minutes for firmer texture. Boiling water should completely cover the egg.

DON'T WORRY WHEN THOSE EGGS CRACK

A perennial question, when housewives meet in homes—or in Cooking School—is "Why do eggs crack open when they are boiled, allowing the white to run out into the water? Does this mean that the egg is bad?"

So critical is this problem—which has ruined many a breakfast, that the New York State College of Agriculture and Home Economics has taken the problem under advisement. The college agrees with home economists that eggs that crack when they are in the three-minute boiling process are not bad eggs. On the contrary, this indicates that the eggs are fresh; (unless the egg already is cracked before it is placed in water). The fresher an egg, the more likely it is to run out of the shell when it is being boiled. This is caused by expansion. When an egg is heated, its contents expand at a different rate than the egg shell. One authority says: "In fresh eggs, the air space within the shell is small. If expansion within the shell is greater than the size of the air space, something must give way. The shell usually cracks and lets out some of the white of the egg."

The cure for the breakfast tragedy is to put about one-half teaspoon of common table salt in the water before the eggs start to boil. Even if the shell does crack a bit, the white will not ooze out. # BURLINGTON HIGH TAKES "LITTLE BROWN JUG" AFTER WINNING GAME FROM BRISTOL BY SCORE OF 18 TO 6

By Louis Tomlinson

The Little Brown Jug finds itself nestled in the halls of Burlington High School once more, following a two-year absence, as a result of the Burs' easy 18-6 win over the Cardinals of Bristol High here yesterday afternoon in a delayed contest before a large crowd of fans. Coach Al Rundle's squad rode across the Delaware empty-handed but returned with the coveted trophy.

However, the game was not so nearly one-sided as the score would lead you to believe. This fact is shown in the statistics of the game. Burlington's running attack surpassed Bristol's by no little, but their aerial raid did not score a great deal more than the Cardinals, although it was more potent when it did strike.

The Burs rolled up their entire 18 points before the home team could get started in the final period. But by that time the Blue and White had a safe lead which was too much a handicap for Juenger's boys to overcome, hence their late rally was futile.

Twice Burlington beckoned at Bristol's door in the initial period but they were thrust each time as the Cardinals managed to hold the big visitors to a scoreless chapter. But in the second canto Rundle's gang counted near the close of the period to go into a lead they never relinquished.

Before they finally scored, however, they lost a third scoring chance when Bud Collier recovered a Burlington fumble on Bristol's 22. A poor kick of only 20 yards by Danny DeMido where the ball on his own 35-yard line where the Burs started their first touchdown drive. A 15 yard penalty for knocking down a passer put the ball on Bristol's 20 yard line with a first down, following a two yard loss. Benny Brown, big colored flash, hit the center of Bristol's line for 16 yards to the six yard line for a second first down in a row. After Bristol had held for three downs, Babe Podroza crashed over for the first six-pointer. The extra point try via a pass missed. So at the end of the half the score stood at 6-0, Burlington.

Midway in the third chapter, however, Burlington kicked their lead to 12-0. Bill Schwend, right guard for the visitors, recovered a Bristol fumble on their own 43 yard line. Then four yard gains were piled up, two Podroza chucked a long pass to Benny Brown, but it was intercepted by a Bristol back on his own 25 yard line. However, the Cardinal back proceeded to allow the pigskin to elude his hands and Brown promptly caught the elusive oval in the air on the 25 and ran down to the 19 where he was downed. A 15 yard holding penalty against the Burs put the ball back on the 34, but on the following play Podroza tossed a pass to Brown again which was completed on Bristol's nine yard line for another first down. A pass was knocked down by Johnson in the end zone, but Podroza picked up five yards through center, and from the four yard line Benny Brown hit the line to score the second touchdown. Again the extra point, via a pass, failed.

Late in the third quarter, the Burs again opened an offensive drive that netted them their third and final touchdown, which was ultimately scored in the final period and which was a superfluous tally as later events proved. Bristol kicked to Burlington to their 30 yard line and it was returned to the 33. Following a two yard gain, Burlington was penalized 15 yards to their own 20 where they started their final touchdown drive. Brown picked up 16 yards around end on a reverse, then a sensational forward-lateral netted 16 more yards to Bristol's 48. Following an offside penalty against Bristol, Brown made a first down on Bristol's 37 on two plays just as the third period ended.

Al Levin gathered four yards, then following a no-gain, and an incomplete pass, that forward lateral combination of Podroza to Carl Kittleson to Joe Rudnicki elicited for 22 yards to Bristol's 11 yard line. The pass was completed to the 20 where Rudnicki immediately lateraled to Rudnicki. Bristol held on the first down but Podroza tossed to Kittleson who caught the ball standing in the end zone for the last score for Burlington, as they again missed the extra point.

Bristol then put on a desperate rally but it fell by far too short. They did manage to get down to the visitor's 20 yard line for the first time during the game but lost the ball there on downs. However, the Burs lost 9 yards on two plays, and when they attempted to kick out, Wilbur Van Lenten leaped into the line, blocking the kick, then further illuminating himself by recovering the blocked kick in the end zone for Bristol's lone touchdown of the afternoon. They, too, missed the try for the extra point on a blocked placement kick. And that was the end of the day's excitement as the game ended a short time later.

Starting for the winners were Benny Brown and Babe Podroza, while Wilbur VanLenten and "Bizz" Wollard for the Cardinals. The two Cladella boys also played brilliantly for Bristol, as usual, while a trio of others, Kittleson, Rudnicki and Captain Carous also starred with Brown and Podroza for Burlington.

And so now Bristol must wait at least another year for a chance to win back the coveted trophy inaugurated for this series.

Trailer Used As Kennel During A Hunting Trip

EDGELEY, Nov. 16 — Joseph Haines left on November 10th for an extensive hunting trip in the northwestern part of Pennsylvania. Besides bear and deer hunting, he expects to do some fox hunting prior to the main hunting season.

Included in his equipment was a specially built trailer which carried in addition to camp equipment a pack of fox hounds, each dog having an individual compartment. The trailer will be used as a kennel for the dogs during hunting season.

Several of Mr. Haines' friends will spend some time with him during the coming season.

BRISTOL BOWLERS DEFEAT FRANKFORD

Sunday afternoon on the Bristol bowling alleys, Bristol took Frankford into camp, overcoming a big lead to win out in the last game, which, by the way, was the largest score ever rolled on the Bristol alleys, Bristol totaling 1137 and Frankford 1024.

Amisson and Cahall hit above the 600 mark for Bristol, and Doyle 622 for Frankford. In the last game, nine of the ten men rolling hit the maples for over 200, with Herb Yates having 246 for the high single.

NOVELISTS SHOW WORKS

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(INS)—Yale graduates who are, or were, novelists will have their day at an exhibition in the Sterling memorial library.

The exhibition, which contains more than 150 novels written by 53 graduates, is the first of its kind. The earliest graduate to write a novel, according to library authorities, was John Mitchell, class of 1912, who authored "Rachel Kell." Yale's youngest novelist is Travis Ingram, class of 1928.

Only four graduates have written detective stories—Cleveland Moffatt, Wells Hastings, Brian Hoker and Rufus King.

Pretended Love Used By Modern Mati Hari's

The girl, whose identity is known to the British, French and Swiss police, is believed to have tracked Reiss across Europe on behalf of the Soviet Secret Police and, after inducing him to fall in love with her, led him to his doom.

Reiss was one of the favorite foreign agents of G. G. Yagoda, former head of the Soviet G. P. U. When Yagoda was removed from control of the G. P. U., Reiss is alleged to have written to Stalin:

"We shall go no further together. In 1928 I was decorated with the Order of the Red Star. Here is the decoration."

With this letter, Reiss is believed to have signed his death warrant. The Soviet Secret Service knew he was too clever and too familiar with their methods to fall for any trap laid by one of their men agents. But he knew too much and, apart from the insult to Stalin, he must be exterminated in the interests of the Soviet Secret Service. So the lovely young Swiss girl was selected to lead him to his doom.

She traced him to Paris, met him "accidentally," succeeded in getting him to fall in love with her, and followed him by air, rail and road until they reached Lausanne.

There she introduced him to friends of hers, a man named "Rossi" and another woman. The four set out one night for a moonlight drive in a powerful car. Next morning Reiss's body was found by the roadside, riddled with sub-machine gun bullets. The others had disappeared.

The Great Game of Politics

AGAIN AND AGAIN this charge has been made, but the practice is neither abandoned nor changed. For example, there is the gross exaggeration of the credits and recoverable assets shown in the Government reports—particularly in the case of the RFC. The Treasury purchased $500,000 of stock and $4,000,000,000 of the notes of this corporation, which it carries on the Treasury statement at face value, conveying the impression that the total assets represent sound values and ultimately will be recovered into the Treasury to reduce the public debt. This, as Senator Byrd asserted the other night, simply is not true. On the contrary, $2,500,000,000 of RFC funds have been diverted for relief expenditures and to pay regular expenses of other departments, none of which are recoverable. "So," says Senator Byrd, "the stock of the RFC is valueless and the notes are not worth more than 50 cents on the dollar in recoverable assets. Yet, only recently the corporation issued a financial statement claiming a surplus of $150,000,000 as of December 31, last." Senator Byrd exonerates Chairman Jesse Jones from responsibility for this piece of deception. He says Mr. Jones has tried to have the balance sheet corrected and the only explanation he—Byrd—ever has been able to get from a high budget official is that they wanted to "avoid huge totals in the regular appropriation bills."

A SECOND example of Administration financial practice which would be condemned in a private corporation is the double budget. The allegations made by Mr. Byrd on this score are devastating. "I declare," he said, "that our expenses are now being leveled off on the $7,000,000,000 basis because of the gradual transfer of emergency expenditures to the regular budget. In 1934 the Government adopted the two-budget system; one for emergency and the other for regular expenses. We have two budgets but we have only one Treasury. In 1934 the regular budget was $2,700,000,000. In 1935 the regular budget is $5,400,000,000—an increase of one hundred per cent in four years."

"A REDUCTION is shown in the statement of recovery and relief expenditures because many of the items of emergency expenditures have been made permanent by transfer to the regular budget. But there has been no reduction in total expenditures; we will spend as much or more in 1938 than we spent in 1937 or in any previous depression year."

"At best it is difficult to comprehend the expenditure of billions, but the confusion has been greatly increased by this device of keeping two budgets. When the Administration announces a reduction in spending for recovery and relief, at once we begin to feel better and to think that finally we can look forward to a real reduction, but later we find the regular budget has been increased and the total is as much or more. We have juggled expenditures back and forth from one budget to the other, but the taxpayers pay the bill for both budgets. The two-budget system has merely aggravated the general confusion."

TO THAT indictment there is no answer. Those charges are merely ignored by the Executive and his spokesmen. So, too, is the fact that in the 1937-38 budget $230,000,000 of social security taxes are used for regular expenses. The effect of this is to reduce the deficit by the use of a tax, collected and paid for the specific purpose of providing old-age security. One can imagine the Administration denunciation of a corporation which used the income of a trust fund dedicated to the aged for current expenses. These are the major instances of financial malpractice which have grown up under the Roosevelt Administration and which are useful in concealing the true state of the mess in which we are. No greater contribution could be made to the effort to get back on an even keel than an insistence upon the part of Congress that this sort of thing be stopped—and candor take the place of calculated deceit and plain misrepresentation in governmental statements.
